Common Prosperity in Spiritual Life: Starting Logic, Cognitive Structure and Practical Prospect

LIU Xu-wen

(School of Marxism, Guangxi University, Nanning 530004, China)

Abstract: Common prosperity includes promoting common prosperity in material life and spiritual life. The common prosperity of spiritual life originates from Marx's theoretical expression of spiritual life, the goal of the CPC, the statement of the ancient ideal of Great Harmony on the spiritual realm, and the practical requirements for solid promotion of common prosperity. The cognitive structure of common prosperity in spiritual life consists of five levels: taking common prosperity in material life as the necessary condition, taking the people's demand for high-quality spiritual and cultural resources as the basic requirement, taking joint construction and sharing as the key essence, taking narrowing the gap in spiritual life as the goal, and promoting the all-round development of people as the ultimate goal. This structure shows a progressive relationship. In the new era, in order to promote the common prosperity of spiritual life, we should promote the high-quality development of spiritual and cultural products and services, strengthen the leading role of socialist core values, promote the balanced development of common prosperity of spiritual life among regions and stimulate the endogenous power of common prosperity of spiritual life.

Key words: spiritual life; common prosperity; socialism; all-round development of human beings; leadership of value
